MINI-BIO:

Evans Fordyce Carlson (1896-1947), army and marine officer and author. Born on February 26, 1896, in Sidney, New York, Carlson was the son of a Congregational minister and consequently spent his childhood in various towns in New England. By fifteen he had left home and school, and in 1912, at sixteen, he enlisted in the army. After three years of service in the Philippines and Hawaii he was discharged. He was recalled in 1916 for duty in the Mexican border disturbances. He was commissioned shortly after the United States entered World War I, and he rose quickly to captain, seeing overseas duty only briefly on the staff of Gen. John J. Pershing. Resigning in 1919, he worked for a time as a salesman, but in 1922, on discovering that he could reenlist in the army only at a lower rank, he entered the marine corps instead as a private. He was commissioned second lieutenant in 1923 and after various domestic assignments was sent to Shanghai, China in 1927 as an intelligence and operations officer. That tour ended in 1929 and in 1930 he served with distinction in Nicaragua. After a second tour in Peking, China, in 1933-1935, he was promoted to captain and assigned to the military guard post at Warm Springs, Georgia, President Franklin D. Roosevelt retreat. He formed there a friendship with the President that led to a private correspondence when he returned to China in 1937 as an observer with Chinese armies fighting the Japanese. He became particularly interested in the Eighth Route Army, the principal Communist force in the north of China, commanded by Chu Teh, and made two long marches with it through the interior. His outspoken praise of the Communists' discipline, determination to oust the Japanese, and elemental democracy, contrasting sharply with the Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-shek, led Carlson into a dispute with his superiors that eventuated in his resignation in April 1939. For two years he traveled, in the United States and again in China; lectured on China, the Red Army, and Japan; and wrote "The Chinese Army", 1940, and "Twin Stars in China", 1940, along with periodical pieces. In April 1941 he was commissioned at his own request a major in the marine reserves, going on active duty the next month. Early in 1942 he was promoted to lieutenant colonel in command of the 2nd Marine Raider Battalion, a picked volunteer commando force that became known as Carlson's Raiders. Maj. James Roosevelt, the President's son, was executive officer of the battalion. Applying the lessons of the Chinese Eighth Route Army, Carlson organized the battalion on radically democratic principles, abolishing officers' mess and other privileges, issuing identical dress and equipment to all, and encouraging discussion of mission objectives and tactics both before and after execution. Carlson's Raiders went into action in August 1942 in an attack on Makin Island in the Gilbert chain, a successful raid that attracted considerable publicity. Late in that year they operated behind Japanese lines on Guadalcanal in another highly successful exploit. The Raiders' battle cry was GUNG HO - a slogan actually derived from an abbreviated form of the Chinese name for an industrial cooperative society but misconstrued by Carlson as meaning "work together". Carlson's methods inevitably aroused hostility, however, and early in 1943 his Raiders were merged with three other battalions into a raider regiment with Carlson second in command. Later he was invalided home for a time. He was an observer at the landings on Tarawa in November 1943 and at the assault on Saipan in June 1944 he was badly wounded. He retired with the rank of brigadier general in July 1946 to a home in Brightwood, Oregon. He continued active on behalf of U.S.-Chinese understanding, international peace and the Progressive Party until his death in Portland, Oregon on May 27, 1947

RE Liberty Weekend-- In case you're interested (probably not) I spent the 4th of July Weekend in my own back yard. I had guests from Florida and nothing would have tempted me to venture into New York that week-end. I saw all I needed to see on TV. Some of what I saw was tacky, some was "glitzy", some pulled at the heart strings, and I loved every moment of it!!!

ATTENTION! ATTENTION! ATTENTION! ATTENTION! ATTENTION!
 Over the past week, three people have tried to sign up for THO #7. Since that game filled over a week ago, of course I could not accommodate them. After due consideration I came to the conclusion that one more Diplomacy game will not add an undue burden to my GMing load. So, there is one more game on offer:

THO #10 "POTTER" DIPLOMACY. 4 positions open. The Game is not open to residents of Alberta, Indiana, New Jersey

Russia to Europe: Would anybody like to buy a used Nuclear Reactor? (real cheap)

Kaiser Koo-Koo to Unit Commanders: Must you interrupt me with these silly military decisions? I make coo-coo clocks, you conduct military maneuvers. My only thought is that clocks parts always move. Good advice for soldiers and sailors, too. Shall we synchronize our timepieces?

Austria to World: I didn't mean to hold things up; but I was waiting to hear from all interested parties.

Another Note: I am in the process of trying to create a better map. I think I have the solution to the "edge" problem, but it may take a while longer for me to produce a "master map" and then have it duplicated. Please bear with me. I forgot to mention: the map I am referring to is the Colonia VI. Also, some of you have a copy of my "rules and regulations". These will be scrapped and replaced with a new set in the not-too-distant future.

Winning isn't worth it if I have to play like you or deal with you. But, you show more guts than your pal Ricci who likes to badmouth people and then drop out before he's called on it.

Fall 1901 orders due 2 PM, Saturday, August 9, 1986

PRESS:

Paris Daily News: The term "Green Peace" does not refer to "frogs" covering the face of the world.

Austria to Italy: Consistant with our agreement, Austria has moved the fleet to Mon on the way to Albania. To further enhance our mutual trust with each other, Austria decided not to armor Trieste in hopes that you did not armor Venice as a threat to Austria's sacred soil.

Vienna to Confucious: Never, but never, anger seven men while holding only a six-gun.

Austria to Russia: After hearing from you, Austria decided that Rumania is a nice placeto visit and hope we did.

Austria to Japan: What! No letters!! Then, Sir, no alliance offer from us.

Austria to England: More than I exptected from you. Hello to you too.

Austria to GM: Code word for telephoning in my orders is "I forgot my own code word". ((If its included in the Press Section, I print it!! GM)

Austrian Harminicats'n'rats: The eye of the hurricane was troubled. A twisting and shimmering within manifested in a conical shape being thrustted downward towards the earth. The winds increased its turmoil.

The noise increased as the engine of the mighty Cessna turned once again. "Full throttle" bellowed Captain Bernie, a smelly cigar stuck into his cheek. The plane climed higher into the cloudy sky and disappeared from earthy view.

The spies were out in force, each checking what the other before him has viewed "No flight plan!" reported the Spy from France. "No exhaust to follow!" mused the Spy from Turkey. "No oil leaks to trail!" yelled the Spy from Russia "And, my word, no Italian susage odors to rely on!" cried the Gentleman from England. "What are we to do!" thundered from each in unison. It was clear that it was not clear whar Bernie and his might Cessna were upto or to be up to.

French Free Press: If a person reviews his problem closely enough, he will recognize himself as part of the problem.

China - India: Once again you show your cross-gaming colors. You wanted to attack the English and French, and Russia can confirm this, until I hung up in your face when you called at 10:45 PM, when you were told not to do so, woke up my wife who was sick and then threatened me because you didn't like where my units were in another game. Well, your brand of cheap diplomacy turns me and others off. There is a minimum standard of ethics in this hobby, and you don't meet it! So, if this makes me your target in every game, come and get me. But, you'd better bring some of your puppets, and we know who they are don't we, because you could never beat anyone one on one
